Wings of Eagles

There are times I dread getting older, but when I look at the alternative, there are some things I have learned about getting older. It gives me the wisdom to look back and appreciate the things I overlooked in my youth. There are many things about life I actually enjoy more now than then. The only bad thing is that my body often feels like it is simply wearing out. I can't run as fast as I used to. (Actually, I can't run at all, but that is another story.) I can't walk as far as I want to and by the time I take all my morning meds it is time for lunch. I need a renewal.

Because these things are physical, they are also obvious if you watch me in action (maybe that should be my inaction) for any length of time. They are part of life. But when we begin to feel this way spiritually it is not always so obvious and it seems to "sneak-up" on us. We often deteriorate spiritually faster than we do physically. We slow in our service to Christ and others and walk past those who need our help. We need a renewal, and fortunately, there is one available.

Isaiah 40:31 says, "They who wait for the LORD shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings like eagles; they shall run and not be weary; they shall walk and not faint." There are times when the struggles of this life and the search for spiritual strength seem to overwhelm us. And then there are times when we just get tired. We need a renewal but, strangely, we often fail to look to the one source of strength that will always be there for us.

Renewal – strength to face the world and conquer the multitudes of things it throws at us - has only one lasting source. God is the only one capable of making all things new. There are some who would rely on worldly remedies but they are, at best, short lived. If we will put our trust in Him, He will replace our doubts and fears with the power to run the spiritual race set before us. We will travel the pathway of life with vigor.

I like the visualizations of running and walking as renewal but my favorite is the idea of taking up with wings like eagles. Those great birds soar past the mountain tops. The circling and watching of the earth below seem almost effortless; they just seem to have a great majestic look as they make the clouds their home. What a great image of our relationship with the Lord as we are made new each day in Him.

I pray that we will allow God to be our strength as we are renewed and ready to fly to greater heights than we have yet imagined.

Love ya,
Dale
